WEAKNESSES

- Depending on their background, some participants might not perceive immediate benefits so they would not be very participative/motivated;
- The skills gained through practising this method do not guarantee that the participants' chances to get employed will increase;
- The method cannot offer a solution in the absence of an external moderator with relevant experience in career planning.

OPPORTUNITIES

- It is a flexible method that can be adapted to different purposes;
- The method permits organisers to approach social inclusion issues, indirectly, by working interactively with inclusive groups (mental, physical, social abilities).
